

STATEMENT OF JONATHAN SAMUEL JAMES WRIGHT

Church, where the Christmas tree used to be. Marc was beside me. I could see alot of people being pushed towards us by the police. There would been about twenty in the crowd. They were shouting at the police and pointing their fingers at them. I seen police but I couldn't say how many police there were. I couldn't hear what the crowd was shouting. I stood looking around for Allister but couldn't see him. I didn't see anybody fighting. I saw two ambulances and they were carrying somebody on a stretcher into the ambulance. The police were in a row pushing the crowd up the street towards us. I saw Stacey Bridgett walk up the left hand side of the street, he was about the First Trust bank, Stacey was walking with somebody but I don't know who it was. Marc and I decided to go home this would be about five past two, the police had the crowd under control then. I walked up the left hand side of the Church and Marc walked up the right hand side of the Church. I didn't get involved in any fighting and I didn't see anybody fighting, only the crowd being pushed up the street. I was wearing light blue jeans, brown walking boots, green bomber jacket and light blue tee shirt, round neck type. The word 'Kangol' is printed on the front of the tee shirt. Marc was wearing blue jeans, white trainers, blue sweater. I can't remember if he was wearing a jacket. Allister was wearing light blue jeans, track suit top, grey colour, with a zip up the front of it. The top had orange stripes on both arms which went down to the elbows. On Saturday night in question I would have drank a bottle of Old English cider and a few tins of beer. I think I threw my cider bottle into the grass at the Loughgall Road roundabout when we were walking up to Dean's house. I
