

OK, the second bit I would like to just clarify is I can recall the phone call on the 27th of April 1997. I'll just confirm that is the 27th of April, that's the Sunday morning.

ATKINSON

Right.

OK, and you were aware of the incident that happened down the town involved Mr Hamill so that's the Sunday

ATKINSON

I mean now but then I wasn't, you know.

Right, that's that Sunday eh which was made by Michael McKee.

ATKINSON

Yes.

Can you just explain to me your relationship with the McKee's.

ATKINSON

Well Michael was the instructor eh in the Tai Kwando club. We chat, well they would've called at my house one, two, three nights a week after the, they might've brought [REDACTED] home for me or I might've went up, waited for the training, a bit of craic in the club and whatever, I might've done the weights or whatever, maybe done a wee bit of training and that's we might've went out occasionally but usually they would have come to my house with their parcel of drink.

You would have socialised then, there is occasions where you would've maybe went out to a bar for a drink or

ATKINSON

Eh not very often.

They would have come to your house.

ATKINSON

Yes.

How did they come, did they get a taxi, would they have drove, driven

ATKINSON

Well probably the car, the car, yeah.

ATKINSON

They would've driven a car over.

I think it's a black car he had.

Eh if they had've came, would they have stayed over often.

ATKINSON

Uh huh eh

They would have.

ATKINSON

Maybe, not once a week but when he drank, Michael drinks like a fish
